[2020] Elden Ring v1.2 Crack + Patch Full VersionQ: Entity framework force generating table into database My problem I have Entity Framework generating a database and generating a table into it whenever I start a new project... I don't want this, I want to tell EF to connect to the database and then have it generate a table. I'm pretty new to EF and still trying to get my head around it, so if you could include as much detail as possible and point me in the right direction I'd appreciate it... Thanks in advance A: I assume you mean that EF is adding a table to your database when your program starts, but you don't want it to do that. First, your question doesn't seem to specify what database type you are using, and I'm guessing you are not using a database project. You'll need to create a DataContext using the method that creates the database, and then set that DataContext object as the default data context. The default data context is what does all the work for you when a model is being automatically generated from the database. public class UsersController : Controller { //Constructor public UsersController() : this(typeof(ApplicationDbContext)) { } public UsersController(System.Data.Entity.DbContext dbContext) : base(dbContext) { //Do whatever else } } Dealer Notes While driving down the road the Elegance caught your eye.
